After having engaged in this unnecessary war, exhausted by means of it a large part of his material wealth, and greatly diminished his European prestige, he knew the discredit attaching to those who leave incomplete a task they have undertaken. Marion [[[by]]] F.

Speeches of the Earl of Shaftesbury in Glasgow, August, 1871

We feel healthy if we feel perfectly well, if no feeling of helplessness overwhelms us, if we are not suffering from any pain which impairs our activities, and, generally, if our willing, joyful activity is not impeded by any obstacle offered by body or soul.

Grand Theories and Ideologies in the Social Sciences

Vistas kept appearing until the eye hardly knew what to do with them—dark-green tree lines converging at a distant yellow corner of the fields, and the lower trunks of a birch grove black as a bar code against a sunny meadow behind them, and the luminous yellows and greens of vegetables in baskets along the road, and grimy trucks with only their license numbers wiped clean, their black diesel smoke unravelling behind them across the sky.
